I am a single work at home mom who has no time to deal with office technology that breaks down and is unreliable. After trying several different brands and types of All In One printers, I finally found the best home office printer scanner. The Canon Color ImageClass is a powerful workhorse.

Not only does it do everything you might possibly need it to but it is fast, reliable, and very easy to set up and use. I have only had one minor issue and customer service was amazing at walking me through it. Personally I feel like the ink cartridges are affordable as they last a very long time. The quality of printed images is the best I have seen. This machine will not disappoint!

It's an HP, what more do I need to say?

I have never owned an HP printer that was difficult to setup or use. This is no exception. Took less than 5 minutes to get this printer up and running on not only my desktop, but my iPhone. This thing is packed with neat features like the ability to print to it by sending it an email. Well that's just neat.

Yes, this only prints in black in white, but for work or school docs this is perfect. The machine prints quickly and clearly. I replaced an HP laser jet 1160 that I bought in college in 2004 with this guy, not because the laser jet stopped working, but because I'm trying to move into today's tech age.

There have been too many times that I was laying in bed working on something on my iPad or iPhone and wanted to print it out and couldn't with my old printer. Well now I can. I also don't have room on my desk for a printer and I don't want ethernet or USB cords to run across the house just to get my printer on the network.
